A Tale of Trees

A seven kilometre walk this morning along the Brecon Monmouth canal that flows past our house was a fitting end to our time in this beautiful region. We have tomorrow to clean and maybe squeeze in time for another short local stroll but we essentially bid farewell today to this magnificent, tranquil place.

The highlights were the trees in all their glory. One huge pine, trees shedding their summer load of burnt orange, yellow and lime coloured leaves, slender tree tops that enabled the squirrels we saw to jump across the channel and avoid us AND finally, let's not miss the Magic Faraway Tree lookalike right outside our comfortable house.

In the afternoon we went for another drive behind and above the property. By luck we witnessed a rainbow across the valley below us. The colours of this area are simply draw dropping. We bookended the day with one last look at Crickhowell's CBD. It's been a lovely week living like a local in Llangattock.
